Connecting the Dots - person sitting at computer working

Across the country, law enforcement agencies are being pushed to their limit in the face of high crime levels and staffing shortages. To effectively improve public safety in this challenging climate, agencies need to be evidence-based and proactive, all while putting the community's needs front and center.

Leveraging Technology in Homicide Investigations: Gun Crime

CaseBuilder Visual with various integrations

It is widely known that the first 48 hours following homicide investigations involving gun crime are of critical importance as they relate to apprehension and case closure outcomes. But how can agencies set themselves up for success, both in the immediate aftermath of a gun crime and in the days, weeks, and months ahead? Leveraging force-multiplying technology, particularly systems that complement one another, can ensure that investigative progress is off to a strong start.
